Language of Instruction

All subjects are taught in Spanish. Academic offer in English is restricted to eight courses. See information here: <http://sl.ugr.es/0b8N>

Although there is no minimum level of Spanish language required, a B1 level according to the Common European Framework of Reference for Languages is the minimum echelon advised to be able to follow courses successfully. Please, remember: ALL our courses except eight of them are taught fully in Spanish. For statistics purposes, in case you would have a Spanish level certificate, please upload it while applying online. Finally, Spanish language courses are offered by the Centro de Lenguas Modernas (CLM): <http://www.clm-granada.com/>

Accommodation

Our university does not arrange students' accommodation. Finding a room is each student responsibility. The most popular way is to share a private flat among the many on offer in our city. Regarding the cost of living, you should expect around 500€/month (including around 200€/month for a room in a shared flat).

Academic Offer

At our Faculty two degrees are taught: Sociology and Political Sciences, and two double degrees: Political Sciences and Law and Political Sciences and Sociology. As an incoming student, you may select any course offered in four degrees, from 2nd to 5th year (first year courses would be available on request). A regular semester load is 5 courses per semester, each course weighting 6 ECTS. The number of credits to be included in students' Learning Agreement depends on each home university. Syllabus is available at our webpage (by selecting the "Guía Docente" of each course):

Buddy Abroad

The main objective is to help international students in their cultural, academic and linguistic integration in the University of Granada. International students who request it are assigned to a student from the University of Granada who knows both the University and the city and the local culture and who acts as a mentor under the supervision of the Vice-Rectorate and Internationalisation Offices at the Faculties.

Living in Granada

Granada is, first and foremost, a university city. It has a population of 240,000 people, 75,000 of which are students, lecturers, researchers and administrative and service staff directly linked to the University of Granada (UGR), meaning that a staggering 1 in every 3 inhabitants of Granada is directly linked to the University. As a result, a lively student atmosphere has flourished in the city, giving rise to the development of a modern, multicultural and vibrant study destination that welcomes people from all backgrounds. The UGR's 5 campuses in Granada and its other educational centers are spread out across the city, giving it an unmistakable university feel.

Furthermore, thanks to its rich historical and cultural legacy and to the presence of a pro-active university community at the UGR, Granada has firmly established itself as a vibrant cultural hub. It currently boasts a wide variety of cultural events that take place throughout the year, ranging from flamenco and rock concerts to theatre and poetry festivals.

In addition to its cultural legacy, another reason to come to Granada is the city's location since it is arguably unsurpassed in southern Europe. The highest mountain in the Iberian Peninsula, Mulhacén (3482 m), is located just 35km from the city, while the subtropical coast is just 65km away and can be reached by car in under an hour. The towns and villages dotting the coastline, such as Motril, Salobreña and Almuñecar, offer scenic beaches and exceptional weather throughout the year. Also, the surrounding towns and villages, such as those found in the mountainous Alpujarra region to the south, offer cultural diversity and stunning scenery.
